

Per the below email from Ben Crompton, Keith Drury, and David Delaney, convention at Stocks Farm in Staffordshire, England has been canceled this year.

Dear all,

Hope you're keeping well.

We need to be in touch, as we are in the unfortunate position of having to tell you that there will not be a convention at Stocks Farm, Bramshall, Staffs this year. We're very sorry about this. Neither Ashley House, Lancashire or Yorkley, Gloucestershire are affected and will proceed as normal.

There will not be any need for preparations at Staffs this year, so workers are remaining in their fields.

We are hoping to hold meetings at an alternative venue the same weekend - the first May bank holiday weekend. Currently we are looking for a suitable venue. We will let you know as soon as possible when a suitable venue has been confirmed. In the meantime, if you have booked accommodation for Staffs convention, please do not cancel it, as it may still be suitable for the alternative venue.

In order to book an alternative venue we need to know approximate numbers of those who wish to attend convention over the first bank holiday weekend. We would appreciate it if you could give us an idea as to how many expect to go. It's possible that sleeping accommodation may be available to book at a suitable venue, but we will be in touch about that.

As many of you will be aware, we have been preparing a Safeguarding Statement/Policy and we hope this will be available shortly.

Take care.

Your brothers
Ben, Keith and David
