

Ashleigh McNary regarding destruction of trust and turning families against each other

Saddened by all this new information and lack of change in the ministry yet encouraged to see those continuing to push for change for the sake of our loved and little ones.

A conversation this week opened my eyes to the continued destruction of trust in the ministry and often their attempts to turn family members against each other when someone dares to speak up. That same conversation taught me just how strong people are when they stand for what is honest and safe.
