

Jalena Henderson regarding the efforts of folks in Saskatoon to create a more morally correct environment

Posted on CCF

I'm so encouraged by hearing about this panel of likeminded Christians here in Saskatoon making such an effort, and utilizing your professional skills and experiences!

I feel like many of us are leaning in the same direction- feeling like we have to try, even if it feels futile right now. I currently struggle with being a part of this way at all, but I'm consciously choosing to stay as of right now, because our elders have been so incredibly supportive and have really gone out on a limb advocating for victims and what is right.

They have had to deal with tough consequences because of it, and I want to show them support.

I think it's inevitable that if policy isn't respected or adhered to, then like Tim said, the next most logical step is to continue on amongst ourselves, together, "unsanctioned".

Thank you all for speaking so openly!
