

Why won't even one Overseer break ranks and say

"I am so sorry and heartbroken for every victim that has unjustly suffered at the hands of members of this fellowship?"

Is it really that hard? I know that if even one took a stand, it would be shouted from the rooftops, partly because everyone would be so shocked.

The fact that no one can seemingly break the stranglehold on this system, after months of outpouring is alarming, to say the least.

Do these men love their place more than they love Jesus? Sure seems like it, because there is zero doubt in my mind that Jesus care is for the victims.

He lived what he preached. What do we call people who will not live what they preach?

Jesus called them hypocrites and whited sepulchres, full of dead men's bones.

When it walks like a hypocrite and talks like a hypocrite...

I do not expect anyone who ministers the gospel to be perfect. Every one of us, myself very much included, are hypocritical in some aspects of our life.*

*It's part of being human. But, when the hypocrisy leaves a brutal trail of victims over decades, that's the kind of hypocrisy that Jesus railed against.
